WEDNESDAY, February 7, 1760.

N°. 250.

HAGUE, September 29.

THE court of France having considerably augmented the duties upon tin, and other commodities imported into that kingdom, and now from hence we are assured, that the States general have resolved to augment in proportion the duties of import upon French wines, which are brought into the dominions of the republic. And this opinion is so general, that all persons are endeavouring to lay in what stock they are able, in order to have their vaults and cellars well replenish'd before the publication of the placart imposing this new duty. If such a placart should appear, as we expect it will suddenly, it must above that preference which our people hitherto gave to French wines, over those of the Rhine, the Moselle, and other parts of Germany. M. de Berkenrode, the nominated ambassador to the most Christian king, does not make any disposition, as if he was to depart in a short time. Nor does the court of France seem to be any more in haste to send a public minister hither.

Algiers, Sept. 8. The Dey has named Hadge Mahomet Hodgi, one of the four principal secretaries of his house, ambassador to the court of Great Britain, and accordingly he sailed this day in a Swedish ship; and carries with him seven horses, three or four tygers, some ostriches, antilopes, and some of the manufactures of this country.

Vienna, Sept. 27. By a private letter from Brieg in Silesia, we have an account, that a Prussian grenadier having laboured under a slow fever for six months, in which time he had received no benefit from the advice of the most eminent physicians, put himself at length under the care of the surgeon in his regiment; by whose directions having taken a vomit, he had brought up a locust as big as a Turkey bean, which is supposed to have been bred in his stomach, by swallowing some of the eggs of that insect in a salad; since which he is perfectly recovered.

Copenhagen, October 4. The marriage lately concluded between her royal highness the princess Louisa of Denmark, and the duke of Saxe Hildburghausen, was celebrated on the 17th inst. at Hirschholm, with great solemnity and magnificence. A little before the ceremony began, his Danish majesty conferred the order of the Elephant upon the duke.

LONDON.

Sept. 25. 'Tis said the hon. Horatio Walpole is going abroad in a public character.

We hear that several ships are going to Portsmouth, in order to be refitted, that they may be ready on any future emergency.

Sept. 26. 'Tis said an account is arrived, that an edict is published by the court of Spain, making it death for any Spanish subjects to trade with the inhabitants of Gibraltar, instead of being sent to the galleys, as was the punishment formerly.

An augmentation is intended to be made in the allowance of the pensioners at Greenwich hospital, of 1*s.* 1*d.* per week to all those who have been warrant officers, and 6*d.* per week to all private men.

The lords of the admiralty have been pleased to give orders for the continuing all the hands at present in the different yards.

Sept. 30. According to the plan laid out for the town of Halifax, the capital of Nova Scotia, that city is at the first to consist of two thousand houses, disposed in fifty streets of different magnitudes. In the middle of the town is to be a spacious square, with an equestrian statue of his present majesty in the center of it. If these streets are all built in strait lines, crossing each other at right angles, as Babylon was of old, and as many cities in the U. S. and Philadelphia in Pensylvania are at present, this town must soon make an agreeable, though not a magnificent appearance. The advantage of regularity of this nature is, that it may with sufficient numbers and power soon be compassed, for the first have over others, whose beginnings are smaller, and increase more gradually, and more on account of their natural beginnings and gradual augmentations; that new Rome itself was very irregular; and so is at the same age of the British London, Paris, and most other great cities in Europe, have the same disadvantages at this day, except in those parts which are of new construction.

It is already given out, that the first session of parliament will, among other things, entirely settle the Asiatic trade, and that in London's Bay, so as to make them more generally beneficial; and that some new regulations will regard to the herring fishery will be instituted, in order to establish that profitable branch of trade on a solid footing.

We hear a Bill will be brought into parliament the next session, to lay a large penalty on any person or persons who shall keep their children in seminaries abroad, whereby a great number of persons are brought up enemies to the religion and government of their own country.

October 1. Application was made to parliament last session of the chaplains in the royal navy, that they may be put on a list with the army chaplains when out of pay.

Eleven men of war and two bombs are ordered to be fitted out in order to sail to the West Indies, to relieve some of the ships that station there.

On Saturday arrived in town the Tripoline ambassador, with a grand retinue.

Yesterday o'clock this morning died, after a few hours illness, at his house in Leicester fields, Dr. Samuel Lisle, lord bishop of Norwich.

Benjamin Keene, Esq. is soon expected to arrive here from Madrid; and the gentlemen in Exchange-alley pretend to say that he has not succeeded in his commission, which has occasioned a little fall in the stocks this day.

October 2. We learn from Frankfort, that the French have in a great measure finished the repairs of the important fortress of Landau, notwithstanding which they have lately summoned several thousand men; whence it is conjectured, that they intend to augment the works of that place, which are already very formidable.

Captain Martin, of the Two Sisters, arrived at Barbadoes, advises, that when he was at the isle of May, getting salt and sticks, he was boarded by a Portuguese vessel of 16 guns and 60 men, who carried him to St. Jago; where finding he came for salt and live cattle, and not for Orchilla weed, they released him. The said vessel is fitted out by some French gentlemen at Lisbon, who have from the king of Portugal all the weed in those islands, for the use of France, as they told Capt. Martin.

Mr. Roubilliac, the famous statuary, who has lately finished a monument to his grace the duke of Argyle, is preparing another to the memory of field marshal Wade; the device is the figure of Fame, holding in her right hand a shield, with his atchievements engrav'd, and the figure of Time endeavouring to take it down.

His royal highness the duke, out of that daily regard which he shews to bravery, will for the future oblige the pensioners of Chelsea college to wear the uniform of their respective regiments; that travellers and passengers may see which corps have most gallantly in battle; and that the brave may meet with that respect and encouragement, even in age, which this nation is always willing to bestow on them.

October 6. This week Mr. Barnard, son of Mr. Thomas Barnard, formerly an eminent linnen-draper in Fenchurch-street, but many years since retired to enjoy an affluent paternal fortune, fortune, and large increase acquir'd in business with the highest reputation, was married to Miss Hanbury, a most agreeable young lady, with 10000 l. and every endowment necessary to make the marriage state happy, daughter of Mr. John Hanbury, a considerable merchant in this city, a gentleman universally known and esteemed.

Bristol, October 7. On Tuesday the 28 instant, at 8 o'clock in the morning, about 400 Somersetshire people met down a third time the turnpike gates on the Ashton road, and burnt the timbers then afterwards destroy'd the Dundry turnpike, and thence went to Bedminster, headed by two chiefs on horseback, one with his face black'd, and the other a young gentleman farmer at Nailsey, carried the standard, being a silk handkerchief on a long staff; the rest were on foot, arm'd with rusty swords, pickforks, axes, guns, pistols, clubs, &c. They call'd themselves Jack a Lents, having the letters J L on their hats and caps. They rang'd themselves in the main street before the George Inn, by beat of drum, huzzaing, and a hunting horn, 3 drums attending them. Here they drank freely, with much noise, and then broke the windows of one Mr. Dutton, yeoman of the hundred, who had, by order of the commissioners, carried three persons concerned in destroying the turnpikes before two justices, by whom they were committed to Newgate. Not satisfied with this, their under chief commanded the house to be demolished, in these words, I say, pull down the house; which was done in a short time, the mistress of the house, who was very big with child, being carried out very much frighten'd.

Hence, after begging money of the people, who were very numerous, they marched about 11 o'clock with drums to Redcliff hill, crying out, They were afraid of no man: but finding Redcliff gate shut (as were all the other main gates), and that it was impracticable to take their 3 brethren out of Newgate, as they had threatened, they turned through Pile street, and marched to the strong turnpike at Totterdown, erected on the Bath and Pensford roads; where about 12 o'clock they fell furiously to work, in casting them down, and in levelling the house and two centry boxes.

But before they had completed half their work, a fire being lighted for burning the timber, a body of the commissioners armed, constables with their staffs, seamen with cutlasses, and others from the city, appeared on the brow of Totterdown hill, and ran with such eager speed to attack the levellers, that they took to their heels, and fled up Knowl hill; but many were knock'd down, and one of their drummers, with others, taken: One farmer Barry was cut in the skull with a cutlass, and, with two others also much wounded, afterwards sent to the infirmary; and about 30 other prisoners, after being carried through the city in the midst of many thousands of people to the council-house, were committed to Bridewell.

During the commotion at Totterdown (within the liberty of the city), the under sheriff read the proclamation against riots; and counsellor Elton, on horseback, with his sword drawn, made a speech, exhorting the people, who were soon therefrom, to disperse.

These outrages in the open day, against known laws of the land, with the various reports and threatenings of the country people, who gave out they were to be join'd by several thousands, in order to enter the city, and rescue the 3 prisoners in Newgate, put a stop to all business in the fair and in the city, and occasioned the shops to be shut up.

Wednesday morning early (the 2d) a great body of the country people, on the side of Hannam and Kingswood, went to the Cupolas, and obliged the workmen to join them; they did the like from coalwork to coalwork, and from house to house, for many miles; those who work'd under ground were oblig'd to join them, by threats of having the ropes cut, and the pits fill'd over their heads. Joseph Derrick and Thomas Cox, taken the day before, were sent from Bridewell about 11 at night in a post-chaise, under a guard of 8 men well arm'd, to Wells, whence they were order'd by the judges to Ilchester goal, 'til the next assizes.

Thursday, the 3d, the people in Kingswood kept gathering, and parties of them finish'd what the Somersetshire people had left undone; so that almost all the turnpikes and turnpike houses about the city were demolished. The rioters, who in several bodies exceeded 700, insisted on the release of the prisoners, as a condition of their retiring to their habitations, threatening otherwise to deliver them by force; which occasion'd the citizens to be upon their guard. Some principal gentlemen concerned in the coalworks, expostulated with the rioters on the danger of opposing the laws, and represented that the colliers are exempted from paying toll, and had free liberty of going to and fro with coals and provisions; which had effect on many of them, who divided from the rest.

Friday, the 4th, about 12 at night, the colliers, as they had threatened the day before, came to Stoke's Cross with horses, and partly cut down the turnpike. Notice being given by signal, and the clashing of fire bells, a large body of gentlemen and citizens well armed, with long staves and pistols, marched to attack the colliers, who did not stay to receive them. On the 5th, seven Kingswood rioters were taken in a skirmish, by a body of fallow ground to guard the prisoners: Robert Price was committed to Ilchester goal, for heading a gang of rioters in destroying the turnpikes. On the 6th, Walter Frisharding, Pearce Robins, and two others, were committed to the said goal for the like offence.

We have an account from Kingswood, that the colliers patrole the wood every night, with fire arms, &c. several parties of them keeping watch by turns, to give notice to any of their body being seized unawares, on account of destroying the turnpikes. On Saturday night a large body of them came as far as the turnpike lodge on the Togbill road, and fired some guns into it. They expected to have met a party from Bristol, on a second visit, to apprehend some colliers, against whom informations have been given to the commissioners.

St. John's in Antigua, November 10.

We have an account from Bermuda, that they have lately had a violent storm there, which had blown down several houses, and done considerable damage to the shipping.

Williamsburg, January 1.

Yesterday arrived at Hampton the Anne, Capt. Parry from Bristol; Dr. John Dixon came passenger in her, and informs us, that the Carteret, Capt. Robinson, was arrived safe in England, in a passage of about thirty days; and that the Hon. Sir William Gooch, Bart. with his family, and all the other passengers that went in her, were all in good health.

ANNAPOLIS,

On Saturday last his Excellency the Governor, in Council was pleased to prorogue the General Assembly (which stood prorogued to Tuesday next) to Tuesday the Sixth Day of March next.

Last Thursday sailed from hence the Schooner Charles-Town, Edward Rook Commander, for Barbadoes, with whom went Passenger Mr. Alexander Cooper, Merchant of that Island.

On Monday Morning last, in Middle River in Baltimore County, was made as great a Draught of Rock or Rock Fish, as was ever known. At one Haul of the Seine, which they drew under the Ice, they caught near 1800 of them, about one Third of which measur'd four Feet, or more, and weighed from 40 to 50 Pounds, and upwards. At a moderate Computation, above 30,000 Weight of Fish were taken at one Haul; many of which were brought down and sold here.
